South Vietnamese headquarters claimed 493 North Vietnamese irroops were killed in all-day fight-

House Committee Calls Pot Traffic $850-Million-a-Year Business in U.S.

The report said some 600,000 habitual marijuana users spent an average of $20 a week on the drug in 1969 and it blamed marijuans for a 322 percent increase in all drug arrests between 1960 and 1968. It said 2.4 million "social users." or occasional amokers, spend an average of $100 a year on marijuana.

Political Augury?

The New York Republican State Committee met in Rochester and concluded the business of picking a slate and endorsing a platform with speed and ease. The only serious differences were over what many in the party consider to be the excessive zeal of Sen. Goodell's liberalism, and even that did not bring an open fight.

The Rochester meeting was in sharp contrast with the earlier gathering of Democrats in, appropriately enough, Liberty, N.Y. That body carried liberty to the point of license. and its proceedings, as a Republican remarked primly, "could be equated with chaos." Certainly, the Democrats do not know who will be their candidates for state office, and the party is ripped crossways with charges and counter-charges of "bossism"-which has its own irony in this case, since the alleged bosses had about as much control over the sessions as Judge Hoffman had over the trial of the Chicago Seven, and without the judge's power of sentencing disrupters for contempt.

Is this an augury for the fall elections? Or, more importantly, for the congressional balloting in 1972? Or the presidential campaign of 1976? That the Democratic party in New York State is in bad shape is apparent euough; even Robert Kennedy, for all his national fame, was not strong enough to bring that local aegment of the party into reasonable order. His death, the struggles among his heirs and the legacy of the Chicago convention have only added to the con-

But this is a chronic Democratic condition. Ever since the Civil War the Democrats have, thanks to their abiding strength in the South, been afflicted by a dichotomy that surpasses that of the Republicans, but which the temptations of the "Southern strategy" are bringing increasingly into the councils of the Grand Old Party. It is more than a dichotomy now-Southern conservatives, old-line New Dealers and the radicals of the New Politics have had a fissioning effect upon the Democrats nationally, one which differs only in degree from the chaos in New York.

But it would be very unwise to draw too many couclusions from this organizational disorder. The Democrats have always had tendency to club each other before election day, and then unitedly club the opposttion. Mr. Dooley, the sage of Archey Road, commented around the turn of the century that he had seen the party dead and buried and the Republicans building a monument for it, and preparing to spend their declining days in the Customs House. And then one morning, "There was that crazy-headed ol' loon iv a party with its hair sthreamin' in its eyes, an' an axe in its hand, chasin' Raypublicans into th' tall grass." It has happened since Mr. Dooley's day, and it could happen again-unless the Republicans can galvanize the very silent majority into more effective political action than sending telegrams to the White House. It could even happen in New York State.

Judge Carswell: The End Draws Near

The ordeal of Judge Carswell and of the Senate is not yet over, His future-indeed a part of the future of the Senate, of the Supreme Court and of the nation itself-now rests in the hands of a small group of seuators. These are the senators, perhaps a dozen in number, who have not yet announced how they will vote in the final test today. Some of them voted Monday against sending the nomination of the judge back to committee, arguing that he was entitled to a vote up or down. Some of them voted to send it back, hoping thus to avoid the upor-down vote or looking for a softer way of killing it than outright rejection. But with that issue behind, these senators must now look at the evidence, feel the heat in the kitchen if you will, and make a choice.

Enough has already been said on the merits of this nomination. We doubt that any senator is going to be influenced heavily by a repetition of all that has been said before. The vote today is going to be closeone way or the other. If Judge Carswell is confirmed, it will be with the narrowest margin of any Supreme Court nominee in 89 years and after more votes have been cast against him than have ever been cast against a Supreme Court justice. To those senators who will cast the deciding votes, we leave the judgment of what so slim a margin will do or not do to help restore to the court

some of the prestige that it has lost in recent

It might be useful, however, to add one last word on the question of presidential power and senatorial responsibility. The power to choose who among us may become a justice of the Supreme Court rests with the President. But the responsibility for deciding who among those he chooses actually takes that post belongs to the Senate. This is not a responsibility that the Senate -or an individual senator-can escape by deferring to the wishes of the President, Although the power of the Senate to veto a president's choice ought not to be exercised lightly, it was put in the Constitution, as yielding tones about the need for Sen. William Maclay said in the first Congress, "to guard against the mistakes of the President in his appointments to office." We think the President has made a mistake and that the Senate has a responsibility to tell so. A vote today against confirmation is not a vote to repudiate a president but a vote to give him a chance to do better, an assertion of conviction that Judge Carswell is not up to the standard set for justices. A vote for confirmation is not a vote of confidence in the President but an assertion of conviction that Judge Carswell is fully qualified to be a member of the most powerful judicial body in the world,

It would be desirable for the German people to examine closely the solidarity manifest in the Guatemalan nation and the grief over what has happened as part of the drama we have been living for several years under the implacable action of violence.

-From El Imparcial (Guatemala City).

This sample of feroclousness given by Guatemalan subversive groups, which is certainly similar to that employed by other terrorists in other countries, only underlines the need for urgent measures to be taken to bring the Latin American states to face a situation which may worsen with time. -From Novedades (Mexico City).

In this tragic affair, the Guatemalan government carries a heavy responsibility. The refusal with which it opposed the demands of the kidnappers, and to all those who intervened to save the German diplomat, led to a tragic result.

In the face of this new defiance of morality, voices will be raised everywhere to deplore It. Will they find a response? One hopes, but one does not believe. Humanity, after so many bloody wars, is paying for the taste of violence it has given to its children.

-From Le Figaro (Paris).

The murder is certainly deprived of any meaning. It is an act of terrorism, which may not only compromise the Gnatemalan guerrillas but also their endeavors, goals and methods of struggle.

The causes of the kidnapping can be found in the restlessness of the Latin American masses, in backwardness and dependence, in the impatience of the young, who do not see any other way out but that of struggle. This is probably a wrong path, which more compromises the left and the revolution than Today, his successor as a Republican vice-president is following that advice with a vengeance and with spectacular success.

Spiro T. Agnew, an everyman of American politics, has become his party's cutting edge, the key to success in the 1970 elections and a vital factor in the days to come. To see him in action around America today is to witness one of the most startling transformations in political annals, Even here in the placid Caribbean, a place to put saide all tensions and aggressions, the spark was present. It was another Agnew speech, given just as he began a brief spring vacation here.

The crowd was not so large this time. But the feelings were evident, and Agnew did not disappoint

As always, there came that one flashing moment when Agnew gave the crowd what it wanted. In other towns on other nights, it might have been about the students or the demonstrators or the radicals revolutionaries, hlack and white, or the "limousine liberals." This time, it was about another familiar Agnew target—the press.

"Our media should be well advised to recognize a new dimension of their responsibility to critically examine our enemies which have no free press to criticize them," he said. "Pulitzer Prizes are not won by exposing the evils of Communism as readily as by discrediting American elective officials. Tons and tons of innuendo designed to smeer officials are

Interest of All

It is obviously in the interest of all established regimes to frustrate the harming of each other's citizens or the seizure of each other's property. This applies equally to affilmes and to diplomatic representatives.

It also applies to mobs rioting against foreign colonies, embass or properties. The world has per-haps moved forward by inferen-tially outlawing full-scale war as too dangerous to express policy, even while tolerating lesser and informal wars, but it has not vet moved toward the lower extreme on this spectrum and taken steps against individual violence.

This perplexing phenomenon is now high in the consideration of many governments. Even in some lands where there have been aching arguments between so-called doves who disagree on the employment of force, there is a drawing together of opinion on the need for more "law and order."

Hemlines Continue Inexorable Drop

By Hebe Dorsey

PLORENCE, April 7.—It will be a loog fall. Skirts dropsharply and inexorably at be Italian showings that began here last night with deluxe and outique collections.

The chic crowd was already vearing midis and maxis up and down the Via Veneto after mass on Sunday, so here, as in Paris and New York, long skirts are : Jait accompli.

Skirts descended from helow he knees to the ankle and here doesn't seem any rule as where they should stop, as ing as they drop. As buyer rene Satz. of Ohrbach's put t, every woman will have to alk to her mirror and decide or herself.

In the early Italian versions. overall impression is a deasant surprise at bow little ime it took, really, for the dready many interesting variints but, ou the whole, the dilhouette is narrow, soft and irap. By using clinging fabrics such as satins, silk jerseys, repe de Chine and wool crepes. en: Italians have avoided falling into a cumbersome, bulky look.

Knicker Look There was a strong Spanish influence with lots of fringed shawls, and capes were almost as popular as coats. Hats were Garbo floppers, suede cloches, Theda Bara turbans or satin skull caps with kinky curls sticking out in all directions.

Although pants suits are still around, knickers worn either with boots or thick wool stockngs look newer and the flared ulotte midi skirt is also more musing than the regular one. In general, men need not bemoan the passing of the mini skirt as these new fashions are recouping neatly by reviving women's curves and playing up the body beautiful.

The evening suit got a hig play in most collections and Gioranna Ferragamo daughter of the famous shoe man; did a pretty black one with a tiny bolero over a rose printed blouse. For Trell, the long tunic over pleated crepe dresses was the answer. Trell also fooled around with the vamp look with red foxes, complete with heads and tails sluog around the shoulders. For evening, he pushed it a notch further with a full-length fox cape in which the animals were stretched vertically side by side.

Pl Crl showed mid-calf wool crepe or jacquard coats. wrapped around pretty gray crepe dresses with complicated blas skirts. Glens offered four variants: the shenherd's with fake sheepskin beige capes; the bandit's, with green loden capes: the little orphan's, with strong institutional overtones, and the pioneer womeo, which were really tongue-in-cheek barroom linssies in sharp green satin with leg-of-mutton sleeves. Graziella Fontana. In a coherent collection for Lux Sport, managed some interesting fabric combinations in suits with tweed skirts and black velvet jackets.

Black Magic Caumont, usually a terrific colorist, went el! black manic this time, with art deco, geometric crystal embroidery over shiny black aatin dresses. Marina Lante della Rovere had far-out fashions for far-out girls who have perfect bodies and don't mind letting it be known. Her sciui-naked, see-through clotics had riveting side exposure with transparent chiffons pinpointed by crystal beading. For modesty's sake, a black silk shawl was draped-occasionally—over the hips,

Despite the inevitable harking back to the 30s, the clothes looked cootemporary because they were worn with boots suede for daytime, velvet or brocade for evening. The colors were subtle and sophisticated with dove gray, garnet, moss green, slate blue and maroon. The Italian collections will last for the next three days, taking in high fashion ready-to-wear. knitwear, sportswear, leather and men's wear.

Chinese Ravioli and Lacquered Duck

By Jon Winroth

DARIS, April 7.-The usual Chioese restaurant in the West is likely to be better in quality for price than the local type of restaurant. There are oumber of reasons for this, he most important being that he Chinese are oot afraid of vork and often keep their estaurants opeo every day of

Mr. Li likes to keep the himself, but he is willing to divulge the basics. He makes his owo pasta for the ravioli, which are larger than their Italiao cousins. The beef and pork that go into them are chopped fine by hand-not ground-and are flavored with soya and onions.

The ravioli unfortunately must be orderd in advance, as is the case with various other complicated specialtles such as lacquered duck and deboned chicken or duck stuffed with "seven treasures," most of which, aside from rice and bamboo shoots, remain mysterles. But the menu lists 110 oifferent dishes and there is no lack of excellent specialties as well as more traditional (in the

All companies have their ups and downs.

BEA have them every ninety seconds.

We make our living out of ups and downs. In fact, BEA aircraft are taking off or landing every ninety seconds. More often than any other airline in Europe. We thought this pretty impressive, so we asked some of our passengers what they thought.

"So that's why your flights are so frequent" exclaimed a Lady Colonel from Tel Aviv. And went on to tell us how impressed she's always been with our Eastern Mediterranean service. A bearded flautist en route to Salzburg now knows why our pilots are so experienced. An English peer said: "No wonder I've always had such good connections!" And a Finnish au pair just said "Gosh!" in a very good English accent.

Soon somewhere in Europe BEA aircraft will be taking off and landing once every minute. So prepare yourself to be even more impressed. No.1 in Europe

Theater in Paris. Reflections on the Closing of a Comedy

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss PARIS, April 7.—French farce has always been the best n the world, but, as is the ase with many things these lays, it appears to be in a state of crisis. The modern master of the genre is generally conceded to e Georges Feydeau, who supolled Paris with at least one comedy a season from the time he began to write in the early 1830s until his death in 1921. Revivals of his plays have been a mainstay of the French stage since World War II. They have, until now, inevitably filled the house. Among the hits of the last decade have been "La Dame de Chez Maxim's," "La Pucc à l'Oreille" and a half dozen

Was the drop in interest due to the fact that the comedy overfamiliar to Or, are tastes had become theatergoers? changing? Perhaps revivals of works by some of Peydeau's contemporarles — Sacha Coolus. Plerre Veber. Maurice Hennequin and Alfred Capus-might auggest an answer. Still. Feydeau's farces remain superior to those of any living author and he seems to have been the model for all foreign farce writers from Pincro to Neil Simon. It seems likely that Feydeau may soon be back. If not, we are in for a gloomy time of it.

Consider such a substitute for Feydeau as Claude Magnier's "Herminie," which has just opened at the Nouveautés. One dld not expect startling brilliance. However, in his earlier "Monsieur Masure" and "Oscar," Magnier had composed pleasant Boulevard trifles, But his latest effort is a piece of sheer and unbearable nonsense.

Vienna Value On East Bloc Cash Varies

سرين الأحمل

'Black Market' Trade Flourishes on Danube

By Clyde H. Fernsworth /IENNA (NYT) .- The Czechoslovak koruna or crown, has strengthened recently in the Vienna market for Eastern European currencies.

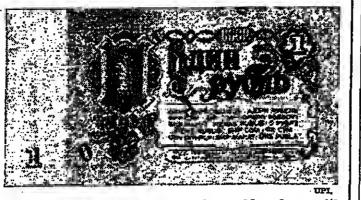

The reason is not any advance of the Czechoslovak economy, which has been running down since the Angust, 1968, Soviet-led invasion. It is simply that there are fewer crowns available because of the severe limitations now imposed on travel outside Czechoslovakia.

The law of supply and demand alone rules this lively market. The supply is from Eastern Europeans who, flouting exchange controls, smuggle their currencies out on trips to the West. The demand arises because Western tourists planning trips to Eastern Europe get a far more favorable conversion in Vienna than they would by exchanging at the official rate once they reach their destination.

Shops Are Busy The Westerners in effect become currency smugglers, too, since it is against the law to import local currency into the Soviet Union and other Eastern European countries. One source of supply is found in the well-stocked variety shops around Mexiko Pletz near the Danuhe, where goods are sold directly for Eastern European currencies. Danuhe river boats bring tourists and boatmen from as far away as the Black Sea and the Soviet Union, most with an interest in Western consumer goods and only their local currency to pay with.

Two Romanians ended up paying 70 lel each for $2 Austrian-made gas-flame lighters recently in a Mexiko Platz store. The lighters might have been sold also for 90 Czecho-slovak crowns, 100 Hungarian forints, 250 Polish zlotys or 12 Russian rubles, the multi-lingual shopkeeper said.

The Mexiko Platz shopkeepers turn their Eastern European currencies in to the Viennese hanks and are credit-ed at the free-market rate in Austrian schillings.

No Fixed Basis

Unlike money of Western Europe, Eastern European cur-rencies are not convertible. Except for the Yugoslav dinar, the Communist currencles are fixed artificially, with no reference to real values.

The Vienna schwarzer Markt (the black market, as the bankers themselves call it) is a window into more realistic rates.

Against the official rate of Czechoslovak crowns to the dollar, the Viennese banks will now pay one dollar for 40 crowns. The Czechoslovak currency had traded as much as 70 crowns to the dollar after the invasion when Czechoslovak refugees were flooding

The official value of the Rus-sian ruble is slightly higher than one U.S. dollar. However, the Viennese banks demand five rubles for every dollar they pay out.

Wide Discounts

In Poland, the official rate for the zioty is 25 to the dollar. But it takes 112 clotys to buy a dollar in the Vienna black market.

As for the exception, the Yugoslav dinar, the official value is 12.30 to the dollar, while in Vienna the rate is only modestly discounted at 13 to the dollar.

This is explained by Yugoslavia's economic reforms, which have created a quasi-market economy and rapidly develop-ing commercial contacts with the West—plus the popularity of increasing vacations on the Dalmatian coast.

The only Eastern European currency not traded in Vienna is the Albanian lek. One private banker specializing in the business explained. "Thet explained. country is simply sealed up too

Trading in Eastern European currencies is perfectly legal under Austrian laws even though it is based on illegal activities, inside Eastern Europe, So far, Austrian authorities have been under no pressure to close down the market.

BRIDGE-

By Alan Truscott

South reached a normal con-tract of four hearts after overcalling one spade with two hearts. West led the spade four, and dropped the seven when his partner led a second spade winner. West's sequence of plays, known as MUD, which stands for middle up down, showed exactly three cards, so East knew that South would ruff a third round.

He shifted to the club queen, and South won with the ace and led his singleton diamond. West ducked promptly, and South had a difficult planning problem.

As the cards lie, it is easy to see that he could have made his contract by putting up the king or queen and developing clubs. One club would be ruffed in the dummy with the ace and one club trick would be lost, either to West after pulling trumps or to East in an overroffing situation. But South did not know that

West held the diamond ace. It seemed more likely to him that East held the diamond ace as part of his opening bid, so he played the ten from dummy, hoping that West held the jack But he was in trouble when East produced the jack and played another high spade. South ruffed, cashed the club king, and ruffed a club with the heart nine in dummy. He hoped for a 3-3 club break, or for West to hold the heart ten. But East was able to overruft and the contract was down one. South had to assume a normal 3-3 trump division, and any play was due to succeed if the clubs divided evenly or if West held the heart ten. The problem was to place the minor suit honors, for the top spades were all marked in the East hand.

East had already played the subtle reason for thinking that DENNIS THE MENACE

he held the jack as well. With a doubleton queen, an expert East in this situation would lead the low card rather than the queen in the hope of giving South a guess.

On the basis East could be counted for 12 points in the black suits, and there was some slender reason for thinking that he would not have the diamond ace in addition: With 16 points that included a strong five-card suit he might have considered further action on the second round of bidding. NORTH

SURVEY OF CRIMINALITY

Reviewed by Allen J. Hubin

ONE of the sorrows of my fiction-reading life is that Edmund Crispin ceased recounting the immensely witty and literate adventures of Oxford don Grevase Fen in 1953 after but eight novels and a collection of short stories. And so if I indicate that I had been searching with some degree of diligence but no success for a copy of the only Crispin book still lack, ing from my library, THE CASE OF THE GILDED FLY, you will appreciate my pleasure on finding it reissued by London and Maxwell (Emsford, N.Y., 10523, $4.95).

This is the first case for Professor Pen, who describes himself modestly as "the only literary critic turned detective in the whole of fiction." (For balance we also have a policeman who fancies himself un-excelled in literary criticism.)

A famed London playwright comes to Oxford to try out his latest highly experimental dra-ma in the college repertory theater. An actress—a former mistress of the playwright, and unloved by all—is done in under circumstances consistent neither with accident, suicide or murder, and it's up to Fen to sort it out. And all the while Crispin is at his prime, lovingly assembling the words of the Queen's English in freshly expressive ranks.

Reprinted uniformly with the above is Crispin's "The Moving Toyshop," which when I first read it many months ago, seemed one of the cleverest and most subtly humorous detective stories then in print. Rereading inclines me in no wise to change. my mind. In NIGHTMARE AT DAWN

(Dodd, Mead, $4.50) Judson Philips has another whack at the theme which ran through his 1969 novel "The Girl With Six Fingers" (as by Hugh Pen-tecost), and this time brings it off far more convincingly. Writer Peter Styles is honeymooning in rural Connecticuit with his bride of one day a day in which two British diplomats are machine gunned, Styles's wife disappears, a boys school (occupied by 100 black young-sters from Harlem) is vandalized, a black man's brutalized body is fished out of a lake, and not far away a multimillionaire sits upon his pile of stone and glass and watches death unfold. Here is a tale that plumbs the depths of prej-udicial passions, that climbs to notable heights of tension. THE CHINESE AGENT (Macmillan, $4.50) by Michael Moor-cock is spoofery that successfully—though narrowly—skirts the peril of silliness. Mr. Moorcock is having a go at spydom (that is, spydumb), specifically the antics of underbudgeted British Intelligence in its neverending battle with the penurious Chinese menace. Jerry Cornell is a British agent who would like to forget that he has a horde of incredibly loathsome relatives in London's de-relict Portobello Road. His assignment is Kung Fu Tsu, local Chicom spy-in-residence, whose minions have stolen and the mislaid-vital secret plans, Ar. noid Hotchkiss is a Chinese American: master jewel thier. who accidentally acquires and plans and disappears into the maw of Portobello Road. And if that weren't enough, we have an aged but agile reductres. for-hire, who conducts one of the more remarkable conquests in my memory.

A GOOD PLACE TO WORK AND DIE (Doubleday, $4.50) the first of Winifred Van Atta; infrequent novels I've read proved to be a well-integrated tale of high finance, conspirace, and detection. Jim Ferguson, s dried-out alcoholic, is an investigator for a New York firm of management consultants. His present concern is one of the firm's brighter vice-presidents who disappeared after dispatch-ing a paranoid letter addressed to himself at a small Illinois town. At the same time the V.P.'s most important con-sultantship, a budding con-glomerate, is tottering on suspiciously shaky financial legs. A stock - market manipulation. manipulation. perhaps?-if so the stakes are high enough for murder.

McCartney Plan May Mean End Of the Beatles

LONDON, April 7 (UPI).-Beatle Paul McCartney today announced a series of indepen-dent projects which close friends said would almost cer-tainly mean the end of the Beatles as a group.

The announcement, through McCartney's attorney and brother-in-law John East-man of New York, said the private ventures will keep Mc-Cartney from directly working with the remainder of the Beatle quartet indefinitely. "It is now highly unlikely they will ever even record together again," one business ssociate said.

Today's announcement said the first solo venture for Mc-Cartney would be the release this month of an album, "Mc-Cariney." Mr. Eastman said McCariney wrote all 14 surgs, played all the instruments, surg all the vocals, produced the record and collaborated on the cover design with his wife.

McCartney's plans to branch out on his own came in the wake of reported squabbles among the group and disagreement about their legal and business representation.

Friends said McCartney was not responsible for the breakup, but was following the example of the three other members of the group. John Lennon and his wife have formed their own. band, Ringo Starr has recently. devoted much of his films, and George Harrison has. been involved in songwriting and record production.

NEW YORK, April 7 (NYT),-The winter ends today for Antonio Ordonez. He flies back to Spain, to the farm paths and gymnasiums and squash courts, to the isolation that will prepare him to stay

Like the basaball players in the south of the United States, like the football players whose strength he admires, Ordonez must go into training. But unlike men who perform for a team. Ordonez may choose when his competition is to begin. This choice is the right of a man who will place his body in front of a hull, whose legs and balance must be in perfect shape, at the risk of-yes-death.

Ordonez has earned millions of dollars and he has invested them wisely in farms and ranches. Be does not need a paycheck from the first corrida of the spring. Let the young men fight from April to October; Ordonez is 38 years old. "I am a little tired," he said. "I will fight in June." Twenty-nine times in his life ha has felt the horn of a buil penetrate his flesh. But only three of them, he notes, were He has lost all sensation in his "grave." right thigh, the most vulnerable part of his body, yet the damage does not show when he strides through the lobby of the

St. Regis Hotel in a conservative suit. He used to visit New York in the company of Ernest Hemingway, the man who wrote of his "unbreakable seal of majesty." of his "slow magic." To this day, Ordonez insists that the death by bullet of his dear friend was "un accidente."

The man who admired his courage has been dead almost ten years now. This time Ordonez visits New York with friends from Malaga, the charming old shipping port on the Costa del Sol. He comes to help publicize the region of his birth but ha does it in Spanish. Although he has been to the United States many times, Ordonez does not speak English.

A builfighter in New York. He is an inch under 8 feet, taller than the businessmen and government officials around him. When he speaks he leans forward, smiling and accommodating like a man whose business is done verbally, indoors. One would not immediately guess that Ordonez works in the slanting sunshine of the late afternoon, on sand, in the shadow of first one in 1946. In 1960 there was the famous "mano a mano," the duels with his brother-in-law, Dominguin, that ended with the eclipse of the older man and the elevation of Ordonez to "numero uno."

His own father was "El Niño de las Palmas" (The Boy From the Palms), Cayetano, the model for Pedro Romero in "The Sun Also Rises." From his father. Ordonez learned the classical style, the deliberate and ritualistic method of preparing a bull for glorious death.

But there are other bullfighters, other styles, and, most important, other eras. With the influx of tourism, a torero does not have to master the classical skills to please the crowd.

The flamboyant star of the sixties was Manuel Benitez, "El Cordobès," a vagabond who fought his way from jail and abject poverty to become a nonclassical but extremely wealthy matador. Take the contrast between the traditional T-formation quarterback, John Unitas, and the scrambling quarterback, Fran Tarkenton. Magnify the intensity a million times. This is the controversy between Ordonez and El "I cannot say one is good and one is had." Ordonez sald the other day, sipping black coffee and smoking Corona cigarettes. "A man must do what he feels. This is the only way I can fight.

"Everything goes in cycles. Frank Sinatra was popular. Then it was Eivis Presley. Next—who knows? Maybe Sinatra again." There was a time in the early sixties when the crowds taunted Ordonez for growing conservativeness in the arena. Be had a response—he retired for 1963 and 1964. But he is popular again. A monu-ment come back to life. Last year he was awarded the Gold Cape for his capa work in Malaga. This year he will fight again, but not quite everywhere.

"I have fought in Spain. Portugal, France, Mexico, Colombia, Guatemala, Paru, Ecuador, Venezuela... and the United States," he said, delaying the lest name, enjoying the surprised look on his "Yes, the U-N-I-T-E-D S-T-A-T-E-S. In Houston, in the Astrodome, in '66. But blood was not allowed. You could not show people what it was all about." Ordonez was paid well for his antiseptic night in Texas, perhaps $20,000 for on hour's work. Yet four years later he shakes his head ever so slightly, as if still violated by the experience,

"I was more sold than paid." he said. Ordonez smiles when he relates how one daughter, Carmen Cayetana, 15, enjoys watching him work but another, Ans Belen, 14, stays away. "Yes, it is cruel," he said. But so is 100 dogs chasing a fox in England. I love boxing but it is cruel-two men in a ring trying to kill each other. "And I say that you are giving a bull a chance for greatness. If he is very brave. his life is spared.

"For the matador, with a great bull, there is a chance to create something great, like a painter who begins a great painting. This is why I am fighting. For my fans, yes. But also for myself. I want to create greatness."

Over the years I have known have tried to catch themselves olf guard by using Townsend's ruse, and it has invariably produced evil results. There was, to begin back in 1938, Gus Cappodopolous, whose thriving hot-dog and chili parlor on South Carry Street in Baltimore was eventually to bloom into a successful Italian restaurant.

While downtown one afternoon Gus decided to test his telephone-answering procedures by telephoning his establishment and asking to speak to himself. Harry, the counter-man, took the call. The Instant Gus said "I want to speak to Gus Cappodopolous." Harry recognized Gus's voice. Being a sensible man. Harry knew that no man in his right muid would spend a nickelthe price of a telephone call in those days—to speak to himself, and concluded that Gus was having a mental collapse. Harry, whose naturally quick wit had been honed by Warner Brothers gangster movies, ask-ed Gus to hold on. While Gus waited. Harry rushed next door to Bellinski's Funeral Parlor. telephoned the police, asked them to trace Gus's call (which could still be done in those days, and explained that the man making it had "gone nuts."

Gus was still hanging on, in a drugstore telephone boot!1. when lour policemen seized him. placed him in a straitjacket and removed hum to the course police station. Gus's explanation, repeated to incredulous policemen, magistrates and docfors, that he was telephoning humselt for sound business reasons, was eventually believed.

But not before the story had spread from Fremont Avenue to Monroe Street, an extensive area in which mothers cautioned their children, ineffecmaily of course, not to go near "that crary man's hot dogs."

The outcome of Dick Oriling's attempt to reach himself by telephone was not so happy.

Until two years ago Dick was executive vice-president for General Consolidated's Rubber Heel Division with offices in Manhattan. Dick had reason to suspect that telephone auswering in his office was being stoppily handled and to test his suspicions, telephoned from Hannibal, Mo., one afternoon and asked to speak to Dick Oriling.

The call was immediately put through to his secretary. Speaking through a handkerchief, as he had seen spies do on television to disguise their voices. he said: "I'd like to speak to

Mr. Orfling, please. Almost immediately, a male voice came on the line. "Who is this?" asked Dlck. "Dick Orfling." the voice said.

"That's ridiculous." Dick said.

and disconnected. Dick dropped the telephoue. He returned to New York on the next place. Within six mouths his superlors were noting unbappily that Dick simply refused to travel and that, in consequence, the Rubber Hecl Division was languishing. He is today a shell of the dynamic young executive of 1968 and has not answered the telephone in eighteen months.

"Suppose," he emplains, his hand shaking as it rushes the gin to his lips, "suppose it should be me."

The Writer as a Young Reporter

By Henry Raymont

NEW YORK (NYT).—When Ernest Hemingway began his apprenticeship on the Kansas City Star on Oct. 1, 1917, the 18-year-old cub reporter was handed a style sheet with four basic rules: "Use short sentences. Use short first paragraphs, Use vigorous English. Be positive, not negative."

Years later, after he had achieved fame as one of the most vigorous and concise writers in the English language, he acknowledged that "those were the best rules I ever learned for the

During his lifetime Hemingway opposed as "the height of silliness" any attempt by publishers to reprint his newspaper stories, fearing that his journalism would be used as a measure of his literary skill. "Now every fact helps us to understand his career," said Matthew J. Bruccoli, a University of South Carolina English professor who is editor of the "Hemingway Fitzgerald Annual."

"Clearly his stories for the Star can provide special insights.

It is always instructive to observe a giant in the process of becoming a giant," Prof. Bruccoli has collected 11 unsigned Hemingway newspaper stories which will appear in a book titled "Ernest Hemingway, Cub Reporter: Kansas City Star Stories," to be issued by the University of Pittsburgh Press on April 15.

During his seven-month stint on the Star, Hemingway's favorite assignments were the General Hospital, the railroad terminal and the police beat, which exposed him to violence and death—themes that were to mark his fletten.

The unsigned stories were authenticated by Prof. Bruccolt with the help of reporters who worked on the newspaper with Hemingway and by studying clippings that the proud young newspaperman sent to his family in Oak Park, Ill. Some of the material was found by the 39-year-old professor in the collection of C.E. Frazer Clark jr., a Chicago businessman who has accumulated a sizable collection of manuscripts and first editions of American writers.

The newspaper stories showed Hemingway's early talent for turning routine assignments into lively, colorfully written vignettes. One story, "At the End of the Ambulance Run," dated Jan. 20, 1918, begins:

The night ambulance attendants shuffled down the long, dark corridors at the General Hospital with an inert burden on the stretcher. They turned in at the receiving ward and lifted the unconscious man to the operating table. His hands were caloused and he was unkempt and ragged. a victim of a street brawl near the city market. No one knew who he was, but a receipt, bearing the name of George Anderson, for $10 paid on a home out in a little Nebraska town served to identify him.

The surgeon opened the swollen eyelids. The eyes were turned to the left. "A fracture on the left side of the skull." he said to the attendants who stood about the table Well, George, you're not going to finish paying for that

In a story about the delay of an ambulance in reaching a smallpox victim at the railroad station, Hemingway clearly violated the rule about short leads:

While the chauffeur and male nurse on the city ambulance devoted to the carrying of smallpox cases drove from the General Hospital to the municipal garage on the North Side today to bave engine trouble "fixed," a man. his face and hands covered with smallpox pustules, lay in one of the entrances to the Union Station. One hour and fifteen minutes after having been given the call, the chauffeur and nurse reported at the hospital with the man, G. T. Brewer. 926 West Forty-Second Street. The ambulance its "controlled sentiment and prose," according to Prof. Bruccoit, was a sketch he wrote about a prostitute excluded from a fashionable servicemen's dance. The story, entitled "Mix War, Art and Dancing," appeared April 13, 1918. It begins this way:

Outside a woman walked glong the wet street-lampilt sidewalk through the sleet and snow.

Inside in the Fine Arts Institute on the sixth floor of the Y.W.C.A. building, 1020 McGee Street, a merry crowd of soldiers from Camp Funston and Fort Leavenworth fox-trotted and one-stepped with girls from the Fine Arts School while B sober faced young man pounded out the latest jazz music as he watched the moving figures. In a corner a private in the Signal Corps was discussing Whistler, with a hlack-haired girl who heartily agreed with him. private had been a member of the art colony at Chicago before the war was declared . . . outside the woman walked along the wet lamplit sidewalk.

The book also contains an article about Hemingway's apprenticeship that describes him as "E big, handsome kid, bubbling over with energy" who could turn out more copy than any two reporters. The article was written for the Star in 1938 by Theodore Brumback, a reporter who left the newspaper together with Remingway on April 30, 1918, when the two young men set out for Italy as volunteer ambulance drivers

The faith of his editors in Hemingway's boundless energy was indicated in an assignment sheet dated Jan. 3, 1918, which is reproduced in the book. It shows Hemingway had seven assignments that day, while most reporters averaged three or Reflecting on the rules for terse writing he learned on the Star, Hemingway said in an interview in 1940: 'These were the best rules I ever learned for the business of writing. I've never forgotten them. No man with any talent, who feels and writes truly about the thing he is trying in say, can fail to write well if he abides by them."
